Danny Kaplan Studio

Brooklyn-based ceramicist Danny Kaplan's latest release is the Odin lamp, which comes in a number of glazed finishes, including the lustrous bronze pictured here. Handmade to order, each piece is thrown in two parts then joined together, before the ornamental waves that line the top are moulded from small coils of clay, adding a final decorative flourish. Kaplan says that, with each lamp, "there's less emphasis on creating facsimiles and more attention on embracing the differences in each one."

Marbera

Founded in Paris by designer Laura Torregrossa, Marbera specialises in marble and stone furniture whose simple forms bring out the natural beauty of the materials, with a particular emphasis on onyx and its many-hued guises. Materials are mixed to create pointed contrasts between stones (glossy, opulent onyx and matt, pitted travertine, for example) or used alone. Bespoke options are also available – choose your design and stone, and have a piece made to your own specification.
